Today's Featured Temple is the Correll Mother Temple

The Correll Mother Temple includes as membership all Officers and Elders of the Tradition. It is the Temple founded by the Blv. Orpheis Caroline High-Correll and passed to her descendants. The Mother Temple has sometimes been called Our Lady of the Exiles. It is more often called Temple Under The Hill. The Temple is said to meet "Under-the-Hill" because Under-the-Hill was the name of the Blv. Caroline's home on the banks of the Vermillion river, where the Temple was founded.

The Correll Mother Temple is the spiritual center of the Correllian Tradition. The Correll Mother Temple is headed by the First Priestess and First Priest of the Tradition, who are also Joint Heads of the Tradition.

The Correll Mother Temple does not function as other Temples do. Rather, its real-time activities are primarily dedicated to maintaining the relationship between the Tradition and the Ancestors. In addition, it also grants both Outer Court and Clerical membership, and is a primary affiliation for many Correllians.

The symbol of the Correll Mother Temple is the Serpent of Prophecy, shown on a red ground for ordinary occasions betokening strength and vitality. The symbol emphasizes the extreme importance of Oracular work to the Mother Temple.

The origins of the Correllian Tradition owe as much to the Spiritualist and Universalist movements as to traditional Witchcraft. An accomplished Spiritualist, the Correllian emphasis on the Ancestors and spirits was already prominent in Caroline's day.

The influence of Universalism, of which Caroline was an enthusiastic member, will also be readily seen in the highly syncretic nature of Correllian teachings which leave little room for religious separatism.
